AMERICAN BRIDE ABROAD

Although English Matrons Earnestly Sought to Marry Him to Their Daughters, "Chicago" Smith's Nephew Paid No Attention to Any of Their Offers—London Gossip.

Correspondence of The Washington Herald.

London, Oct. 1.—All the excitement and pleasures of London life are in front of James Henry Smith's bride, for she knows very little of them. She has never been a London hostess, and I doubt if she has been presented here at court. When in London she has mostly stayed with her sister, Mrs. Anthony Drexel, who knows every one and does some magnificent entertaining. The Smiths are bound to take a London house, as Mrs. Smith will be bringing out her girl, who, I am told, is very good-looking. She has been educated under the direct supervision of her mother, who has views of her own on what a young girl should know. As Mrs. Anthony Drexel will also be bringing out a daughter in the spring, these two girls are in for a good time. Both will in time be immensely wealthy, so it only from that fact great interest is bound to be taken in them. In the matrimonial market of London, the debut of American heiresses is looked with as much exactitude in social note books as is the entrance of Derby runners in sporting circles.

The bride's intimates here say Mr. Smith proposed twenty-two times to Mrs. Rhineland Stewart, as, although they were great friends and companions, she did not want to marry again, merely desiring a platonic friendship; but, of course, you can accept as much of that as you like. One thing is certain, "Chicago Smith's" nephew could have married into the peerage a dozen times over had he desired it. All the matrimonial agencies used to deluge him with offers of introductions to the flower of the British aristocracy, but having no sense of humor, he ended by sending back through the post-office piles of these communications, and said if they continued he would prosecute those who forwarded them for making themselves a nuisance. Mr. Smith's sister, Lady Cooper, of Hursley Park, had "views" for his future. She was eternally attempting to marry him to some friend or another, and at one time it was thought she had inveigled him into proposing to a daughter. She tried him with girls in their teens, mature spinsters, and charming dowagers, but nothing availed, his countrywoman, Mrs. Stewart, having won his heart.

Snubs a King.

Miss Aimee Netter is carrying all before her at Baden-Baden. She is the mirror of fashion, the most beautifully dressed girl in the place. Her sayings are quoted, her gowns copied, and her photographs are in every window. Her vogue is complete and quite unique for a young girl, for in these days it is generally the young married woman or the mature spinster who has it her own way and becomes the fashion. Of course, Miss Netter's case is an exceptional one. Long before her arrival at Baden-Baden news of her successes in Paris and on the Riviera had preceded her. At the latter, the King of the Belgians gave brilliant festivities in her honor. He used to call her a "pocket Venus," and openly gave it as his opinion that she was "irresistible." All this, however, never turned the head of the beautiful American; on the contrary, it seemed to show her power, and she soon realized that she was in a position to snub the frisky monarch, which she did when his attentions became boring. "Thanks he is going to flirt with me because he is a King—no fear," she said. The snubs she administered to King Leopold only made her the more bewitching in his estimation. This slip of a girl was one of the very first women who had dared to keep him at arm's length. He was in a turn and more amused. Once when he came to take her for a motor drive she sent down to ask if he wished Princess Orossoff (who chaperoned her so much) also to come. Leopold replied that he was sorry, but there was not room for the princess. "Then I am not going," was her answer. LADY MARY.

Why Facial Treatment Beautifies.

"Facial massage is certainly one of the surest roads to longevity of facial beauty, and not alone because of the correct exercise of the muscles of the face or the feeding of the tissues by nourishing creams. There are other and more potent reasons," says Hattie M. Shacklette, who has long been considered authority on the care of the hair and skin. Miss Shacklette began the study nearly fifteen years ago, commencing first in a drug store in this city, later going to New York, where she was connected with the Imperial Company, then located at 22 Fifth avenue, and later she studied in Paris and London, visiting these cities three distinctive summers for the latest information as to the preservation of woman's beauty.

The face, neck, and scalp, Miss Shacklette asserts, must be treated so that the nerves are relaxed. This, she declares, is the whole secret of restoring youth and beauty to the face. Contracted muscles make wrinkles, and interfere with the correct circulation of the blood, which feeds the tissue. Wrinkles come from nerve contraction. "Now," continues Miss Shacklette, "when a woman comes to me and earnestly wants her face improved—and is truly interested in the matter—better her face will surely be. As the hands knead the muscles her mind will begin to feel satisfied; little by little she 'lets go,' and as she does the lines are smoothed out. She comes for the next treatment expecting another half hour of rest, and she gets it. The back of the head is rubbed and the contracted muscles loosened. This shows itself directly not alone on the face, but in the eyes. The woman who spends hours at the Monte Carlo gambling tables keeps up by constant visits to the masseuse, and the result of hours of work and hand therapy are done away with in an hour by the deft fingers of the operator.

"The Monte Carlo treatment is called the 'rhythmetical massage.' Long strokes are employed, and a cream wonderfully lubricating in its effect is used. This treatment will be characteristic of the Shacklette establishment, located at 102 and 104 F street, this fall. Miss Shacklette also employs original ideas as to the care of the hair, and contends, not alone for its own beauty, but that of the face as well. It should be shampooed with cold water. The whole idea is relaxation, no drying up of the oil and nourishment which nature supplies to the extremities. If so, one pays the penalty in a rough skin and scanty hair. Frothy hair and dandruff are successfully treated, and the 'rhythmetical massage' is employed for the scalp as well as the face.

Miss Shacklette is her own chemist and manufactures a large line of toilet preparations, which are largely used both in this country and Europe. Her establishment is under the care of an expert manicurist and a corps of well-trained operators, and during the next month she herself will be constantly in attendance.
